STANFORD UNIVERSITY

Graduate Program

2022-2023 academic year
(matriculating 2023-24)

About The Program

Graduate training in Anthropology at Stanford University is designed for students who seek the Doctoral (Ph.D.) degree, and for (current Stanford students, only) who seek the Masters (M.A.) degree, only.

Entering graduate students need not have majored in anthropology as undergraduates, although many have backgrounds in behavioral, biological, environmental, and social sciences.

Students may choose from the following Department tracks: 1) Archaeology; 2) Culture and Society.

Graduate Ph.D. Degree Program

Prospective graduate Ph.D. applicants should submit their applications on line by reading the information located at <http://gradadmissions.stanford.edu>. The electronic application fee is $125.00 and is paid by credit card

The deadline for graduate application to the PhD degree program is 6 December 2022 9:00PM Pacific Standard Time. Application procedures for the Ph.D. degree program can be found at: <https://anthropology.stanford.edu/graduate-program/graduate-admission>. Successful applicants for the Ph.D. program may enter in Autumn Quarter, only. It is the department policy not to defer graduate admission.

Degree requirements for the Ph.D. include successful enrollment and participation in department review courses, completion of 2 qualifying exams (one for topic and one for area), and an oral exam defending the dissertation. Students are encouraged to plan for the completion of all work for the Ph.D. within 5 years. Anthropology Ph.D. students must take a minimum of 135 quarter units with a minimum GPA of 3.0. The maximum allowable number of transfer units is 45.

Financial Support

For Ph.D. students without external funding, the department endeavors to provide needed financial support through a combination of fellowship, teaching and research to all students admitted to the Ph.D. degree program who maintain satisfactory degree progress.

Graduate funding for the Ph.D. is usually provided for 5 consecutive years over four quarters in the Autumn, Winter, Spring and Summer Quarters. First-year students who have not entered the Ph.D. with outside funding are required to make at least 1 outside funding application for pre-dissertation training and improvement funding by the end of Autumn Quarter. First and second year students are encouraged to make at least two funding applications for Summer Quarter field language or area studies. Third-year students who have not secured funding for the Fourth year are required to make at least 3 outside funding applications for dissertation improvement and research by the end of Autumn Quarter. Fifth year students who have not secured funding for the sixth year and above are encouraged to make at least 2 funding applications for dissertation write-up by the end of Spring Quarter.

Admissions

Admission to the graduate programs in Anthropology is granted for matriculation beginning in Autumn Quarter 2023-2024. Ph.D. applications must be submitted by 6 December 2022 for consideration of admission in the following Autumn Quarter.

The Department

Anthropology is devoted to the study of human beings and human societies as they exist across time and space. It is distinct from other social sciences in that it gives central attention to the full time span of human history, and to the full range of human societies and cultures, including those located in historically marginalized parts of the world. It is therefore especially attuned to questions of social, cultural, and biological diversity, to issues of power, identity, and inequality, and to the understanding of dynamic processes of social, historical, ecological, and biological change over time. Education in anthropology provides excellent preparation for living in a multicultural and globally-interconnected world, and helps to equip students for careers in fields including law, medicine, business, public service, research, and ecological sustainability and resource management.

Archaeology in Anthropology builds on the research interests of the Archaeology faculty appointed in the Department of Anthropology as well as associated with the Stanford Archaeology Center. Faculty research areas may include historical periods ranging from early humans and contemporary studies of material culture.
