Stanford Library Resources for Anthropologists

Regina Roberts, Alesia Montgomery, and Claudia Engel

In this workshop we will introduce you to the resources that the Stanford Libraries provide to support anthropological and archaeological research. We will demonstrate the catalog, identify the most relevant databases, show how to search them, and how to download articles. We will provide an overview of the relevant holdings in Special Collections and the Map Center. We will provide information about qualitative research tools and where and how to get support, including workshops, access to computers, GIS, and software.

Regina Roberts is a librarian at Stanford Libraries. She is the Bibliographer for Anthropology, Communication & Journalism, Feminist Studies, Lusophone Africa Collections, and Sociology.

Alesia Montgomery is the Subject Specialist for Sociology, Psychology and Qualitative Data at Stanford Libraries and has over two decades of experience in qualitative research and teaching.

Claudia Engel is Academic Technology Specialist and Lecturer at the Department of Anthropology and affiliated with the Center for Interdisciplinary Digital Research (CIDR) at the Stanford Libraries.
